There must be some kind of magic potion which Mr. Palumbo pours into his morning coffee, otherwise there is no reasonable explanation how this jack-of-all-trades manages his daily workload. Besides playing in a gazillion of bands and projects, he also releases records for spazmos like you on No Front Teeth and Glass Eye Records and has only recently put out a new killer LP with his main band MISCALCULATIONS.

With THE EXIT, however, he once more lets out his fondness for dark and gloomy minimal Post-Punk and Dark-Wave. "Words of wounds" is already THE EXIT'S second longplayer, following last year's "Hierarchy of Line" and the "A Pressured Temple" 7inch shortly after. Musically, the 10 songs blend spheric synth sounds and echo vocals with slower beats and guitars, Wave, Post-Punk and Synth-Pop, and sound a lot like later THE DAMNED, THE CURE and JOY DIVISION, all topped by the snotty and distinctive voice of THE GAGGERS. The superb poetic words poke the wound of your fears and nightmares and make this record a disturbing and beautiful trip into the catchy darkness.

Tracklist:

Lightning Will Deliver
Ten Thousand Years
A Pressured Temple
The Contortionist
To Nowhere
Redundant By Rust
Into Darkness Flee
A Possessive Love
