We really got desperate waiting for "We're disparate" by our favourite Canadian sons of Pop-Punk who start this small sign of life with the somehow less poppy and more dodgy title track that is by any means a STATUES song as we know and love it before getting to the real nitty gritty with the super cool and catchy "To the top" and the fantastic "Young enough" where they once more demonstrate that they are still young enough to care and definitely not old enough not to start. The live shot on this Sub Pop Single-Club rip-off sleeve is the living proof and everybody who was in the audience that night can tell the tale.

We're Disparate
To The Top
Young Enough
